Bio

Amy Long is a photographer and multidisciplinary artist based in Bella Vista, specializing in gouache, oil, and acrylic paintings. With a passion for capturing the charm and vitality of the natural world, Amy's work reflects a keen eye for detail and a love for storytelling through art. Over the past 15 years, Amy has honed her skills as a commercial and family photographer, combining technical expertise with a creative vision. A member of the Northwest Arkansas Master Naturalists, Amy draws inspiration from the parks and landscapes of the region, blending artistic vision with a deep appreciation for the environment.

Artist Statement

My work is rooted in a deep appreciation for light, texture, and the quiet beauty of everyday moments. I create fine art through photography, oil, gouache, and acrylic, capturing the interplay between nature, memory, and emotion. Each medium I use shapes my artistic approach—gouache lends itself to rich, charming scenes, oils evoke depth and introspection with moody palettes, and acrylics allow for bold expression. Through my paintings and photography, I aim to create a sense of peace and connection, transforming fleeting moments into meaningful, lasting works of art. My artistic process is deeply intuitive, blending realism with impressionistic touches to create work that resonates emotionally. At the heart of my work is the desire to bring peace, connection, and beauty into everyday life. I believe art has the power to slow us down, evoke memories, and transform a space into a sanctuary. Whether through the intimacy of a photograph or the depth of a painting, my goal is to help others see the world—and their own surroundings—with a renewed sense of appreciation and wonder.
