Bio

I'm a self-taught artist who finds joy in exploring color, texture, and the playful rhythms of nature. With a background in teaching and a love for creative experimentation, I work with acrylic, gouache, and recycled materials to craft pieces that feel spontaneous and alive. My process is guided by instinct—blending vibrant hues and organic forms to spark curiosity and wonder. Through my art, I hope to invite others to see the familiar in fresh, imaginative ways, as if through the eyes of a child.

Artist Statement

I appreciate the opportunity to submit and share a little about me. My work emerges from a lifelong connection to creativity and a natural inclination toward playfulness. As a self-taught artist with a background in teaching, I find joy in experimenting with acrylic, gouache, and recycled materials, crafting pieces that embrace the spontaneity and vibrant textures of nature. Each artwork is guided by color combinations that feel instinctive and organic with the ability of capturing wonder.
