Lauren Carson

Bio

My name is Lauren, and I am a fine art photographer who lives in Northwest Arkansas. I began my photography journey in high school starting with film. I then spent the next 17 years going to school, getting my doctorate and working in the health care industry. The onset of COVID combined with parenting two neuro-divergent kids caused me to stop working. However, this time allowed me to return to my creative passion. I began taking photography classes and have continued to grow and specialize my skills for the past five years. My work is typically abstract with an emphasis on capturing the unexpected. I love creative portraits and conceptional women's portraits. I am currently on the board for a local art gallery, and I love the community of artists that I get to work with. When I'm not creating, I enjoy spending time with my family, hanging out with my dog and three cats, and doing yoga.

Artist Statement

Most of my art is created through personal feelings and emotions. I love being able to creatively capture a feeling in an abstract way that still leaves some interpretation up to the viewer. I really enjoy weird unexpected images that utilize intentional camera movement, ghosting, slow shutter speed, or multiple exposures.
