Bio

I am a self-taught artist and maker, creating stuff out of other stuff for the past 33 years. I am passionate about repurposing materials that might otherwise be discarded. I love to share my techniques and inspiration with others through classes, workshops, live demonstrations and my YouTube channel.

Artist Statement

My art seeks to highlight the often overlooked beauty found in our everyday environment by breathing new life into discarded materials. When viewed through the lens of potential, anything en masse can become art. My goal is to invite viewers into a world where the ordinary becomes extraordinary. By freely sharing my processes and techniques, I hope to inspire others to nurture that creative part of themselves that I believe we all have.
