Bio

Beginning around 13 years old I took an interest in drawing from nature, then painting from the fields and trees and old farms in Michigan. Studying in museums about the history and beauty of artists before me led to the use of human form in my painting and sculpture. Combining the movement of humans in and through the landscape reflected my chosen rural lifestyle, living immersed in nature.

Studied at the Art Academy of Cincinnati for four years and continued to this day to create compositions that included interacting figures in narration of common moments of work or play.

In these works I am suggesting atmosphere and motion by the use of color harmony, contrast, and resonance and to imbue an otherwise common theme with beautiful line and color.

I am currently exhibiting with:

Boswell - Mourot Fine Art , Little Rock, AR. Justus Fine Art, Hot Springs, AR. Greg Thompson Fine Art, Fayetteville, AR.

Artist Statement

drawing, painting and sculpture help me to look closely into the world around and to find pleasure by journaling beautiful moments. The movement and interactions among people, plants, animals and the weather are plenty reasons to celebrate life by making things and to share them.
