Artist Statement

My practice employs art as a means of representing the embodied self, making space, and ultimately fat and queer liberation. I am broadly interested in exploring the materiality of photography and curious about methodologies and techniques that emphasize the physicality of a medium that is increasingly associated with the digital. My photographs refuse definition by muddying the distinctions between photography and craft, between image and print, and between the digital and the physical. Broadly, the work is guided by a conceptual framework which places emphasis on the importance of intervention, imagination, and re/construction in developing thoughtful representations of marginalized bodies and experiences.
