Bio

Kimly Brownback is a potter who moved from Orange County, CA to Northwest Arkansas, now thriving in Fayetteville. Her passion lies in functional pottery, where form meets storytelling.

Having ventured away from the tech world, Kimly has wholeheartedly embraced her love for pottery, and her art reflects the blend of tradition and modern flair. She finds joy beyond the potter's wheel, as she aims to bring people together and foster a sense of community through her work.

Artist Statement

As a potter, I find joy in crafting heirloom quality pieces that each tell a story through the combination of form and function.

Every meticulously shaped piece is a blank canvas, awaiting stories to be etched or painted by hand. My art celebrates craftsmanship through beauty and storytelling, inviting others to form their own meaningful connections with the pieces.
