Bio

Carol Corning was born in 1955 and grew up on a 150 acre farm in a family of ten. Her rural roots inform her work and she draws on those memories to create scenes that are indicative of growing up in a large family with a caring mother in rural Arkansas. She uses found objects, fused glass, dress patterns and fabrics to create compositions that take the viewer back to a time when families ate, worked, and played together. Her works tell stories that attempt to engage her audience through the use of compositions, colors, and interesting textures.

Artist Statement

Many of my works are inspired by my mother who was an avid quilter and seamstress. Whether I'm assembling quilt blocks or creating scenes from the era I grew up in, my stories are about a simpler time. My attempt is to recreate shared memories that evoke emotion in my viewers who may have lived during that time or have heard stories passed down from their parents. I am drawn to color and light and my work is constantly changing as I experiment with found objects.
