Bio

I grew up in Springdale, AR. I have always been captivated by comic book artwork, but couldn't draw very well. In 2005, I bought a used Canon AE1 and taught myself how to get a proper exposure, then moved onto developing the film and creating prints in the darkroom. I wasn't any good at it, but I didn't care, I was creating. In 2010, I lived in India for three months, this instilled in me a love of street photography. Capturing life unscripted gave me joy. I didn't touch a camera after that trip for about five years. I felt that I could never produce the quality of work that I did in India. In 2016, with the encouragement of my wife, I began to teach myself photography again. At the start of the 2020 pandemic, I chose to really focus on learning more about photography and printmaking.

Artist Statement

I photograph what I feel is interesting. Sometimes I will take a shot and not exactly know why, I just get a gut feeling and push the button and move on. Sometimes I am pleasantly surprised. I am drawn to people, I attempt to capture the humanity of it all.
