Bio

A native of Fayetteville, AR, and a graduate from Baylor University and the Gemological Institute of America, Craig is most known for his endeavors in the jewelry world. He is the President of Underwood's Fine Jewelers in Fayetteville and his passion, artistic talents and creativity have helped produce beautiful, nationally recognized, award-winning jewelry designs. More recently, harnessing his love for the great outdoors, he has applied that talent towards landscape photography. Craig creates emotional, breathtaking, award-winning and nationally-published landscape photography using his unique artistic perspective that was developed and fine-tuned throughout his jewelry career.

Artist Statement

Much of my best photography is the result of an unplanned journey. I start off with the intent of photographing a particular scene but often get led astray, discovering unforeseen beauty in the process. At first, I would fight the urge to meander off in an unexpected direction, but over time I have embraced this free-floating style. When shooting, whether it is a planned or unplanned destination, I look for scenes that speak to me about the beauty of being outside. My desire is to capture an image that evokes a feeling of discovery while being immersed in an outdoor experience. I have done my job as an artist if my photo makes you ponder, even for a moment, and wish you were there.
